A Smithsonian Institution Traveling Exhibition

Hosted by East Central Community College

We live between fences. We may hardly notice them, but they are dominant features in our lives and in our history. Our past is defined by the cutting point of barbed steel and the staccato rhythm of the white picket. Americans have fenced millions of miles and countless rivals have seized post, rail, board, and wire to stake a claim for home and happiness. The fences that skirt our properties are central to establishing ownership and identity.

Between Fences is a cultural history of fences and land use. It examines how neighbors and nations divide and protect, offend and defend through the boundaries they build.

Between Fences is part of Museum on Main Street, a collaboration between the Smithsonian Institution and the Federation of State Humanities Councils.

Support for Museum on Main Street has been provided by The United States Congress, the John S. and James L. Knight Foundation, and The Hearst Foundation.
